Remarkable Record of Its

it's one of the greatest mercantile establishments of the West.
The heavy guns of the "secondary boycott" were directed at the store almost continuously from 1890. Prior to that time in June, 1890, the store had enlarged its quarters on Spring street by purchasing the entire portion of the newly erected Phillips Block so that at that time it had a frontage of 100 feet. Later, in the face of boycott hammering, the store expanded to occupy the balance of the ground floor and upper stories of the Phillips
Block. Since then also the Ponset
Block on the north of the Bumiller Block were opened to the public on April 17, 1890. The store had 6,000 feet of floor space at that time and was the largest retail store in Los Angeles. In the fall of 1894 when the store had made these changes far too small and a new one at Eighth and Broadway was purchased. When the new store was completed it was then open to the public in less than 30,000 people passed through its seven entrances in one day. The cost of that structure was estimated at $100,000 and the permit was the largest in the history of Los Angeles
at that time.

"TIMES' GAINS
In the period during which the boycott against The Times was most vigorously pursued—from August 5 to November 4, 1910—there were 125
days of strike. The Times' gross receipts were what was until then the record gain of over $600
daily—from $722 on the day of the strike to $800 three months later. The blue buttons had become a rarity.

In 1908, the typographical workers boycotters received a severe blow in the form of a decision by Judge Armstrong of Sacramento county declaring their pet strike illegal. The case arose from a strike of typographical workers of the Los Angeles Brewing Co. The judge found and, as in the fight on the Times, did all they could to influence readers and advertisers against the strike.

The McClellan's went to court seeking an injunction to restrain the typographical and the Federal Council of Trades from any act tending to injure the business of the paper. The decision, which has become a precedent in labor litigation and has been enunciated in many other tribunals, Judge Armstrong set aside the right of the word boycott and in its place substituted the term "unfair combination" or person to inflict injury upon some person or company with the object of enforcing compliance to a demand.

He held that the boycott is thus a violation of all established law in protection of the rights of person and property and that it is directed in the interest of labor in general but of a special class. The injunction issued.

It is interesting to note in this connection that the United States Supreme Court, in the case of *Wheeler
Co. v. the United Hatters Union*, of Danbury, Ct., ruled that the boycott is illegal and that anyone or any organization instituting a boycott is liable for damages. (February 1, 1908.) The United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth California District declared the boycott illegal in the case of

PRISON INQUIRY FOLLOWS RIOT

Twelve Lose Their Lives in Colorado Mutiny

Leaders Commit Suicide as Their Fight Fails

Convicts Will be Employed in Reconstruction

Failing to effect a breach in the prison wall, the rioters set fire to the building.

The hero of the dynamiting attempt is a Catholic priest, Father Patrick O'Neill, who carried the explosives to the foot of the cell-house wall. He had covered the machine-guns from the prison walls.

In all, seven prison guards were killed, three at the outbreak of rioting Thursday noon and four more during the night.

Those killed in the early rioting
were Roy Brown, Walter Rinker
and Elmer G. Ervin. Those slaug-thered in the cell houses were John J. Moriarty, Robert A. Wiggins,
Shepherd and John W. McClelland.

LEADERS END LIVES

The convicts who had incited Danny Daniels, who led the riot, and others as executioners of the guards
Charles Davis, A. H. Davis, George
(Red) Riley and James Pardue.

Pardue was wounded in the abdomen during the early rioting and removed to cell house No. 3 by the other convicts. He was found the morning with a bullet through his abdomen, fired by one of the other convicts to end his suffering.

Three of the other ringleaders
were found dead in the same cell powder burns, on their temples bearing mute testimony to shots fired at close range. The body of Dolan, one of the leaders, was discovered half in and half out of the cell.

The floor of the cell house, which last night served as the execution
chamber of four unarmed guards, was slippery with blood. The bodies of Dolan, O'Neill, John W.
McClelland, two of the slain guards,
were found in the cell house, bound hand and foot. Both had been shot through the head.

Closely estimated at the time of the outbreak of the riot leaders of the same, but it was not until an hour and a half later at daybreak, when O. E. Moriarty, one of the surviving guards, made his way into the prison yard, that the attacking forces learned of the fact, entered the cell house and rounded up the prisoners.

AFRAID TO LEAVE

Moriarty said he was afraid to leave the cell house until daylight for fear of being mistaken for a convict and shot by the watchers outside.

With him in the cell house were John Pease and Lawrence
Roche, who escaped the fury of the convicts. Roche's sister, Josephine, secretary to Warden Crawford, had remained at the prison
all night, fearing some one would try to blow up the bullet-riddled building.

Guarded by a bullet-riddled bullet torn out of a window of the cell house, as the bodies of Eliot and Wiggins were tossed out.

Giving her brother up for dead,
she had left the prison about two hours earlier. When she learned that he was alive she collapsed.

Guarded by fire, which destroyed

two of the cell houses, and scarred
by machine-gun bullets and dynamite, the prison yard this morning was in utter ruin.

Following a preliminary investigation, Warden Crawford said
he believed he had discovered only half a dozen desperate criminals actually participated in the riot. The remainder, he said, were compelled to accompany these men into the barricaded cell house on threat of death.

ONLY FIVE GUNS

He also declared the convicts'
entire arsenal consisted of four revolvers and one rifle. The revolvers, he said, were smuggled into the prison, while the rifle was seized from a guard on watch in the crow's nest in the dining hall. Other guards inside the prison, he said, were unarmed.

He revealed that prison authorities were aware that some guards had been smuggled into the prison and had been conducting a vigorous search for them, even tearing up masonry at spots suspected of concealment.

Crawford also announced that none of the prisoners at the penitentiary had escaped in the confusion of the riot.

He also announced that convicts at the penitentiary will be set to work to rebuild cell houses Nos. 1 and 2, which were destroyed by fire during the riot, as well as the main dining hall and the chapel, which likewise were burned.

Because all the convicts will be employed at this work, construction of a new cell house, authorized by the last session of the Legislature, will be delayed.

Meanwhile, strict disciplinary measures will be placed in force pending resumption of regular prison routine. This afternoon National Guard tents were pitched in the prison yard, and the convicts will be housed in the tents until the cell houses can be rebuilt.

HISTORY OF RIOT

Here is the history of the riot
in brief:

Mutiny among the prisoners broke out Thursday noon in the main dining hall. James Pardue, armed with a revolver, engaged in hand-to-hand combat with Eliot and Elmer G.
Ervin, guard in the crow's nest overlooking the dining hall. Pardue and Danny Daniels then seized Ervin's rifle and keys. They liberated other prisoners and killed two more guards, Roy Brown and Walter Rinker.

They next cut telephone wires
from an alarm had been flashed to Canon City police. Within fifteen minutes the rioters were in complete control of the prison. They disarmed the remaining guards and locked them up in cell house No. 3.

Police and firemen arriving at the prison gates were driven off by armed convicts. The walls soon were surrounded by hundreds of armed men, who prevented any of the convicts from escaping.

Police reinforcements were rushed from Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, and National Guard were mobilized. A National Guard plane was dispatched from Denver with tear bombs.

DEMANDS MADE

Shortly after 4 o'clock about 175
convicts retreated into cell house
No. 3 and guards entered the prison yard, herding the other convicts into the yard, where they were held spent the night without shelter.

Daniels then sent a trusty to Warden Crawford with a note demanding that he and his four companions who led the riot be refrained from further automobile hooliganism threatening murder all the next day.

Crawford declined to parley.

Shortly after sundown, Daniels sent another ultimatum.

The cell house meanwhile was burning furiously. The building was surrounded by a wall of fire and smoke. Dynamite was used in an attempt to blow open a breach in one end of the cell house through which machine guns could be played on the convicts inside, but the effort was unsuccessful.

The body of Guard Abe Wiggins
was recovered shortly afterward.

Warden Crawford has been warned for two years. He was chief guard in the institution for fifteen years.

He is rather shy in demand, and not given to making quick decisions, but his associates say he is firm in his administration of duty.
No prisoner, whatever his crime, is denied an audience with Crawford, who is an incorrigible.

Mr. and Mrs. Crawford have four children, ranging from 4 to 15 years of age.

WARDEN PRAISED

Gov. Adams tonight warmly indorsed Warden Crawford's policy in handling the riot. In a statement to the Associated Press the executive had the following refusal to meet the demands of the prisoners:

"I do not believe that the demands of the Governor was issued after he had made a minute inspection of the destruction wrought by fire and fighting at the State institution. With the exception of the Governor, Adams went immediately to the penitentiary on his arrival here tonight.

GOVERNOR'S STATEMENT

His statement follows:

"The damage is much greater than I anticipated and had not expected to see the institution reduced to the ruin that I found within the walls. I make this pledge: That I shall see that every provision is made to put things as they should be."

"This is a thing which all of us naturally regret greatly but nobody could have avoided it."

"In my opinion, the warden
showed the very best judgment, and, to my mind, he saved a great many lives by pursuing the policy he adopted at the outset of the mutiny."

Among the guards with whom the Governor talked briefly during his short visit to the prison were O. A.
Earl and Lawrence Roche, who were held all night as hostages by the barricaded cell house escapees.
The Governor also met with several convicts who had been in cell house No. 3 during last night's battle. He said he would make a much more thorough inspection tomorrow.

NEW FIRES REPORTED IN NORTH

Lowering Humidity and Heat Cause Recurrence of Forest Outbreaks

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 4. (Exclusive)—Lowering humidity and rising temperatures caused a recurrence of forest fire alarms today after several weeks of quiet.

Two fires in a State forest reserve near Wachetah, in the Redwood National Forest, Humboldt county, have swept 4000 acres, according to reports from Eureka, but are believed under control.

North of Fort Bragg a fifty-acre fire threatened a wide area of virgin redwood belonging to the Union Lumber Company. The fire lines are reported holding at tonight.

Around Garberville small fires are reported burning and the State forester's office has information of small blazes in Del Norte and Siskiyou counties.

When Madame Melba Sang "La Traviata" in 1898

On Wednesday, April 27th 1898, Madame Melba sang au revoir to Los Angeles in "La Traviata", Giuseppe Verdi's great lyric opera. The appearance was staged at the old Los Angeles Theatre on Spring Street, now the Lyceum. Madame Melba appeared in the roll of Violetta Valery and she was supported by the Damrosch-Ellis Grand Opera Company. Fashionable Los Angeles turned out en masse to hear the golden voice that had thrilled the world for twenty years and established Nellie Melba as one of opera's immortals. ♦ Had you been sitting in the wings that night looking out over a vast audience, you would have seen mutton sleeves, wasp waists, trailing skirts, drooping moustachios and flowing beards.... commonplaces then, now remembered as relics of the gay 90's.

Does your furniture recall that great event?

ADDED ADVANCE
ON RAISINS OFFFederal Stabilization Body
to Withdraw OfferOfficial Statement Will Lay Blame on GrowersFormal Announcement as to Step Set for TodayBY FLOYD J. HEALY
"Times" Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 4. (Exclusive)—The Federal Fruit Stabilization Corporation tomorrow will announce abrogation of its 1-cent-a-pound additional advance on muscat raisin grapes for the 1929 crop. The announcement will say the action was taken by the board of directors and will be accompanied by a statement from Lloyd E. Tenny, the organization's president, placing blame for the failure of this portion of the grape stabilization program on the raisin grape growers, located principally in the San Joaquin Valley.

Because of this action, the Federal Fruit Stabilization Corporation, organized for the purpose of carrying the fight for grape industry relief to the Federal Farm Board, with successful results, finds itself in the position of being virtually a nonfunctioning body in the handling and distribution of its current year's crop. A determined effort is under way, and will continue, to hold a skeleton organization in existence so it can function on the 1930 crop.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT

President Tenny's statement, in part, will say:

"A growers' organization can do only those things that meet the approval of its members. It is responsible to its constituents. During the last two weeks there has been a growing sentiment among growers against making their payments to underwrite the program."

Saying it was decided to ignore this sentiment as long as it originated and emanated from isolated individual growers, Tenny will continue:

"Recently, however, the organization's co-operative growers in the raisin belt territory have taken a positive attitude against supporting the stabilization corporation."

"This can be interpreted in but one way, namely: That these growers do not believe in the program sufficiently to support it financially.

BOARD'S ATTITUDE

"If the co-operative-minded growers, acting in a meeting, take this attitude, the board of directors feels other growers should be treated in like manner. The independent shipper, who is not a member under the contract with the stabilization corporation to make collections on their shipments, would be placed under these conditions, in a very difficult position and an agency of the entire industry, like the stabilization corporation, should do nothing to interfere with the business of one shipping agency in competition with others."

"If, therefore, the entire raisin belt was going to fail to support the program, it would be manifestly unfair to allow the other sections of the State to carry the entire financial responsibility."

OFFER WITHDRAWN

"With these facts before them the board of directors of the stabilization corporation is unwilling to stabilize either raisins or fresh grapes for the season of 1929 and should modify its contracts with the growers to the extent of collecting only a nominal sum (three-fourths of 1 cent a package, instead of 3 cents) to take care of the expenses that already have been created and to make up the skeleton organization so it can be used in 1930 if found necessary."

PIOUS ZEAL THEIR UNDOING

Two Bankers, Indicted for Embezzlement, Said to Have Stolen to Enrich Church Fund

NEW YORK, Oct. 4. (Exclusive)—Excessive pietry proved the undoing of Richard G. Munson and Edward Miller, cashier and assistant of the First National Bank, Wyndham, N. Y., who were indicted by the Federal grand jury for embezzlement.

Despite the fact that it is charged, they stole to enrich the fund of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which they were active workers, they will go on trial in the near future. Out of the $400, they are said to have embezzled, $100 went toward a new organ for the little church.

BOTH RESPECTABLE

Munson was treasurer of the Wyndham church and Miller was overseer of the poor. Both were respectable. Their first fall from grace, it is charged, occurred on May 19, last, when Samuel W. Hall, a custom of the bankers, delivered 200 shares of Electric Bond and Share Corporation sold for his account.

Two days later the pair ordered Spencer Trask & Co. to sell another 100 shares. When a check for $9026 came through, it is charged, Miller took $135. Munson $35 and the organ fund of the Methodist Church got $100, while Hall got an additional $100.

All this was done without the knowledge of other officials of the First National Bank, it is asserted.

GRAIN GROWERS

$20,000,000 Funds

CHICAGO, Oct. 4. (AP)—The Farmers' National Grain Marketing Corporation may be in a position to handle some of this year's grain crop, said a joint statement issued today by the Federal Farm Board and the co-operative associations of three.

The corporation will be a $20,000,000 concern. It has been especially designed to receive loans for marketing grain from the Federal Farm Board. Owners of the organization will be the co-operative associations now existing.

The subcommittee finished the drafting of the articles of incorporation today after the policies were approved by the Farm Board yesterday. The subcommittee, headed by George Ferrand, legal counsel for the Farm Board, and the committee will meet with him in Washington the 10th inst. Immediate incorporation in Delaware is scheduled to follow.

The statement issued today said steps will be taken to establish headquarters in Chicago and offices in other important grain centers in the United States. Also, the corporation eventually will establish branch offices at advantageous points in grain country.

Thirty-six representatives of co-operative wool and mohair associations and owners of grower-owned wool warehouses met with members of the board to evolve a national-marketing plan by which they can receive and underwrite provisions of the agricultural Marketing Act.

WOMAN CONVICT
MAKES FORTUNEWashington Society Matron
"Cleans Up" $300,000Big Game Hunter Watches

Shooting Husband

NEW YORK, Oct. 4. (Exclusive)

Since her incarceration in the women's penitentiary on Welfare Island, half a year ago, Mrs. Esther Evans Wilson, Washington society matron and noted as an explorer and big-game hunter, has "cleaned up" $300,000 in Wall street, it was learned today.

Mrs. Wilson was convicted of second-degree assault for shooting her husband, Dallett H. Wilson, prominent lawyer and advisory member of the Republican National Committee, in his office the Hotel New Yorker Building the evening of March 29, 1928. For a while Wilson hovered between life and death, but eventually recovered.

ONE YEAR TERM SET

The Municipal Parole Board, which has jurisdiction in cases where a judge imposes an indeterminate term of from six months to three years, fixed Mrs. Wilson's imprisonment at one year.

Wilson's own freighter will transport from North America to a fireproof steel-concrete terminal now being completed adjoining the new plant at the head of the turning basin. The factory will include a main assembly building, with an area of 270,000 square feet, and warehouses of 150,000 square feet, with other units to be added as demands increase.

A minimum of 80 per cent of the output of the plant will at first be distributed through Pacific Coast dealers, it was announced, with oriental exports to increase as the market develops. Approximately 100,000 tons of parts and raw material will be delivered to the factory during the first year of operation.

PRONOUNCED SAFE

Some of the stocks she bought early this year have gone up as much as 240 points, according to a business associate, and she has displayed unusual shrewdness in picking securities that went up, and in "unloading" at the right time.

THE NEW PANAMA PACIFIC

Some persons who have observed her in court and markets declare that Mrs. Wilson has been acting strangely, but before she was admitted to the island she was under observation at Bellevue Hospital for three weeks last February, at the end of which time she officially was pronounced insane. Her husband previously declared that in his opinion she was mentally deranged when she attacked him.

Mrs. Wilson is 49 years of age. She is the first of her sex to have been granted a leave of absence from a heavy-duty naval expedition to the interior of Africa, and was also credited with having been farther north than any white woman within ten degrees of the North Pole.

University of California Warriors to Battle St. Mary's Footballers This Afternoon

BEARS CHOICE OVER SAINTS

California Expected to Down St. Mary's

Price Will Start Regular Eleven in Clash

Capacity Crowd to Witness Ancient Rivals

BERKELEY, Oct. 4. (Exclusive)—A curious admixture of bite ghosts, fussy Golden Bears, swivel hips, lightning formations, shifting and other diverting dishes will be presented for the collective football palate of about 70,000 people afternoon in the California Memorial Stadium when the galloping Gaels of St. Mary's College meet with Coach Clarence "Price" Price's fast-coming University of California varsity. This game is considered one of the early classics of the 1929 season and certainly a headliner throughout the nation.

Coach Slip Madigan has brought along a great team since the terror-ridden days of 1926 when a California wonder squad ran up a 10-1 record and a national championship. Madigan, who has not come to this country more than once, but even he had the nerve to ride to victory. Both teams are pretty much the same in personnel as last year. Both are stronger in experience. Last season the Bears were easily shut out, 7-0, visitors, while Bill Norton, the playmaking fool, snatched a long one and made the only score of the year. Norton probably will plant himself in the way of some more throws tomorrow, and if he misses two, he will know what anxiety means. Price plans to use a regular line-up in tomorrow's game. The Bears are made favorite over the Gaels in the contest.

OXY GRIDDERS TRIUMPH, 14-0

Clemore, Santa Barbara half-back, attempted to run with the ball behind his goal line, and was tackled by the Bengal's 195 pounds of Tigris for a safety.

The final touchdown came in the fourth quarter after a 41-yard march straight down the field. Myers went over from the 1-yard line, and then failed to get out of the end zone. Oxy had been stopped on the 2-yard line when Roselle fumbled and Santa Barbara recovered.

The best football player we saw on from the Bengal's was out for the game from the Chico City, and was owing to the name of Kessler, who played defensive fullback, and offensive tackle. Kessler was in on every play, and repeatedly slipped in to down Oxy ball carriers. He was half the Santa Barbara defense.

BENGAL LINE WEAK

Oxy's showing last night was anything but brilliant and indicates that Kienholz has his work cut out for him if he hopes to get the Bengal in shape for the New Mexico University game next Friday night.

The Bengal forwards were pitifully weak, and failed to open holes for the Oxy backs to go through, while Oxy ball packers apparently found it difficult to get out of their own way on occasions.

They will have to do better than that if they are to retain the Southern California Conference championship this year.

MONTOYA QUICK VICTIM

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 4. (P)—Young Nationalists, Filipino handymen, last night, outwitted Montoya, San Diego, in the first round of a scheduled ten-round bout here to night. Neither boy had fairly warmed up when Nationalists caught Montoya with a terrific left hook to the liver. The local bantam doubled up and was unable to rise at the count of ten.

Hudkins Puts Work on for Cameramen

As Hudkins yesterday boxed five rounds for the news reel sound picture, he camped on the hillside, reached the Bridgeport. The Wildcat proved a good actor by staging a real fight in hopes that Mickey Walker will get a squint at them before they clash at Wrigley Field on October 29 for the mid-weight championship of the world.

The Nebraskan was in fine form and weighed under 100 pounds after the strenuous workout. He had not planned to start boxing so soon, but feels so good he will continue the work indefinitely.

"I only wish the fight was twenty-four hours away instead of four days," said Hudkins. "There is no new champion after the fight. I feel so sure of that that I bet $5000 at even money on myself. I ought to have to give odds on myself because this is a contest to be 'one-sided.'

Jack Korn, returned from Walker's camp at Soper's ranch yesterday and a conference is scheduled with Promoter Jack Doyle and Al Hoffman today over some of the details of the match.

John G. Mexican lightweight champion, was yesterday matched to box Danny Woods of Seattle in the six-round semi-wind-up to the Wildcat-Carter-Billy Townsend bout at the Olympic Tuesday night.

The card includes a special event between Dario Barron and Hector McDonald. Matt Cale and Mission Bolo meet in a four-round preliminary feature Art Molina and Jess Vasquez.

Juniors Open Tourney Today

First-round matches in the Alhambra High School tennis tourney for boys and girls 13 years of age and under are scheduled for today, starting at 9 o'clock this morning.

May Doe and Dorothy Bundy are favorites in the girls' play, and Jimmie Hobson rates as one of the choices in the boys' division. The other preliminary feature Art Molina and Jess Vasquez.

UTILITY SHOWS GAIN IN AUGUST

San Joaquin Light and Power Net Up 33 Per Cent

Gross Income for Period Runs $192,703 Higher

Operating Profits for Twelve Months Increase

August net income of the San Joaquin Light and Power Corporation totaled $518,861 after all charges, an increase with $309,470 for August, 1928, an increase of $120,289, or more than 33 per cent, according to a statement issued yesterday by the company.

Gross revenues for the month were up to $1,087,754, an increase of $192,703, or 19 per cent, higher than the same month last year and compare with an increase in the operating expenses and maintenance of $54,237 to $49,976 for August of the year.

After operating expenses and maintenance, there remained a balance as net operating income of $602,581. This compares with $684,335 reported for August, 1928, and represents an increase of $81,744, or more than 12 per cent.

Gross revenues for the twelve months closed August 31, last, reached an aggregate of $10,897,574, which compared with $10,158,972 in gross revenues for the preceding and corresponding twelve months, an increase of $748,602, or 7 per cent.

Operating expenses and maintenance over this same period increased $541,243 from $4,157,515 in the previous year to $4,698,158 for the twelve months closed August 31, last. This left the balance of $10,356,331 for the net operating income of $61,168,715, against $60,996,157 for the same period last year, an increase of $300,599, or about 3.3 per cent.

After first cutting the balance remaining from the net operating income to $2,803,066, which compares with a balance of $2,797,779 at the close of the preceding twelve months, an increase of $4,287.

BUSINESS IN LOCAL AREA HOLDING UP

Security-First National Bank Survey Notes Gain Over September, 1928

While the activity of business in many lines was seasonally higher in September than in August, industry and trade as a whole throughout Southern California maintained higher levels during the month just closed, compared with August, and particularly when compared with September, 1928, according to a report of the Federal Reserve district as now constituted, and later to consolidate districts so as to cut down the number from twelve to six and lay the foundation for nation-wide branch systems.

But this set-up will likely run into opposition from the bankers in the Federal Reserve districts of relatively small area. The Philadelphia district, for example, may represent the possibilities for expansion in the San Francisco district, and the Boston district may be jealous of the prospects in the St. Louis district.

For the same reasons, whatever economic boundaries may be suggested by the committee proposed by the Federal Reserve Board will be the targets for active criticism by different banking interests. In fact, in the light of the bank survey, it is evident that the balance sheet of the Security-First National Bank is about as strong as it can be.

BRANCH SUCCESS CONCEDED

Extension of Bank Systems Believed Assured; Nation-wide Program Possible Immediately

BY EARL E. CROWE

While Comptroller of the Currency J. W. Poole in his address before the American Bankers' Association in San Francisco seemed to favor the extension of branches for national banks along regional lines, it is not at all certain that the program will work out this way. That present restrictions will be lifted is generally conceded, but the question of setting up limits and boundaries will undoubtedly stir up acrimonious differences of opinion.

Comptroller Poole's plan calls for the appointment by Congress of a committee consisting of himself, the Secretary of the Treasury and the governor of the Federal Reserve Board to conduct a survey and recommend the establishment of boundaries along economic lines in which branch systems would be permitted to expand. His idea is that branch banking should be confined within definite economic areas in which business conditions require the service of a unified banking system.

RESERVE AREAS FAVORED

Whether Federal Reserve districts should fix the limits of these systems the Comptroller declined to say. Many influential bankers favor this plan. The program of this group, as privately expressed, is to launch a national Reserve district as now constituted, and later to consolidate districts so as to cut down the number from twelve to six and lay the foundation for nation-wide branch systems.

But this set-up will likely run into opposition from the bankers in the Federal Reserve districts of relatively small area. The Philadelphia district, for example, may represent the possibilities for expansion in the San Francisco district, and the Boston district may be jealous of the prospects in the St. Louis district.

LOCAL STOCKS BEAT RETREAT

Los Angeles Markets Recede in Orderly Fashion

Severe Eastern Bear Attack Resisted Here

Edison and Union Oil Issues Lead Decline

Southern California Edison common, Union Oil of California and Union Oil Associates, three of the stanchest stocks traded in the Los Angeles market, led yesterday the hurried retreat of a long list of stocks under the drive of fresh selling by frightened speculators. Hardly a stock listed on the Los Angeles Stock and Curb exchanges escaped without loss in price, although the downward trend was not as severe as in the New York market.

But Capt. Dollar was not so much inclined to talk on this subject as he was on the development of good roads in China. One would think that the automobile manufacturers would be more interested in this than the owner of steamship lines traveling into nearly every port in the world.

When I asked him why the automobile people were not keenly interested in such a subject, he pressed a button and had brought to him letters from the presidents of nearly every automobile company in the United States congratulating him on the work he was doing in this field and offering him all the support and co-operation that they could.

Today there are practically no concrete roads in that country—a few hundred miles at best. But dirt roads will first have to be constructed, and then the concrete ones will follow.

"For generations the roads of China have been about three and a half to four feet wide—just enough for a man and a wheelbarrow to pass," said Capt. Dollar. "You could not drive a team of horses over them and a distance of fifteen miles out of Shanghai, one of its largest cities. But the National government knows that an adequate system of transportation is one of its most important factors in its development. That's the prime reason why the liquidating movement was accelerated by similar calls made by Los Angeles brokers. The general opinion after the close was that more selling may be expected today but that the worst is over for the present.

EDISON SLUMPS

Edison common, which only a few days ago was selling above 90, yielded another 4 1/4 points to finish at 85 1/2. The market was still in a fever of uncertainty, and later in the day the liquidating movement was accelerated by similar calls made by Los Angeles brokers.

Veteran Shipping Chief Says Development of Good Highway System Greatest Present Need

BY JOHN F. SINCLAIR

(Copyright 1929, by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

When I saw Capt. Robert Dollar at his office in San Francisco this week, I had hoped to get him to open up upon the subject of the American shipping policy. He did say a few things about it and they were vigorous, too, for this 85-year-old shipping magnate says nothing in a milk-and-water fashion. Everyone of his sentences are picturesque and dramatic. I doubt if he could be uninteresting if he tried.

But Capt. Dollar was not so much inclined to talk on this subject as he was on the development of good roads in China. One would think that the automobile manufacturers would be more interested in this than the owner of steamship lines.

When I asked him why the automobile people were not keenly interested in such a subject, he pressed a button and had brought to him letters from the presidents of nearly every automobile company in the United States congratulating him on the work he was doing in this field and offering him all the support and co-operation that they could.

Stark Truth of Conditions Told in "Times"

A series of articles by Paul Marion, French ex-Communist, disclosing the truth about conditions in Russia under the soviet regime, which brought about his own disillusionment, will be published in the Times, the first appearing tomorrow.

PARIS, Oct. 4. (Exclusive)— facade behind which a cast of six million bureaucrats make a country in moral and economic misery.

That is Paul Marion's stark characterization of the structure found soviet Russia to be and explains the disillusionment which brought about his sensational resignation from the French Communist party after eight years' leadership in the organization.

Marion's disillusionment comes during fifteen months spent in Russia. In that time, he writes in his article, the article disclosed, he found, "the magnificent facade began to crack before his eyes and to lay bare before his pitiful reality of Russia."

TO COLLECT AMMUNITION

Marion went to Russia as one of the political agitation and propaganda section of the French Communist party. But he has come from what he describes as a carefully arranged secret itinerary and, remaining only a few months after others of the French Communist delegation had departed, made discoveries which appalled him.

Oppression, oppression, the low wages, sordidly low living standards, fear, corrupt officials in amazing opposition to the propagandists for Soviet Russia, seek to have the world believe, by Marion, and an account told about by him in the article.

"I consider it necessary," he writes, "to make known the truth about soviet Russia, and to do so in the foreign and small foreign press, their extreme, anti-Soviet illusions."

BOLSHEVIST SYMPATHIES

Marion was converted to Bolshevism by the writings of French and Belgian exponents of the doctrine. The Russian Bolshevik revolution made him a young soldier, a communist and an immediate Bolshevik propagandist in the army.

Demobilized in 1918, Marion joined the French Communist party, which had just been formed. He spoke often in revolutionary circles and at the Comintern.

As a popular orator and journalist he was quickly singled out for promotion by the French Communists' political bureau, which eventually intrusted to him the task of organizing its work of agitation and propaganda.

Today's Bible Text

Also I say unto you, Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God." St. Luke xii:3.

THE ONE THING NEEDFUL

What the world needs is a fountain pen that a girl can use on her eye brows.

BIG GAME

Rich Americans are taking up estates in Mexico that they can shoot up on. Always the passion for big game.

IT CAN HAPPEN

Gov. Moody says that there are crime rings in several cities of his State. It is possible, Texas used to quite a reputation in this direction. But the statement has a familiar sound in any State.

CARRYING A LOAD

Man explained to the Judge in a divorce case that he couldn't have been intoxicated because he made it a rule never to drink more than a gallon a day and he would never notice this trifles. Mabel Weilbrants might like to see what this wastrel could do if he were in training.

LIGHTWEIGHT HOLES

Market merchant goes to jail for sixty days because he sold a bit of Swiss cheese that proved to be two ounces under weight. The size seemed all right, but the weight wasn't there. Thus proving that the yodelers who punch holes in our cheese are by way of being profiteers.

BIG BUSINESS

General Motors seems to have been invading many fields of activity. Now the corporation is figuring on opening a chain of radio stores. First thing we know the company will be looking for a bunch of shrewd workers who can stand on congested corners and sell lead pencils.

NOT TOO CLOSE

Some day in the effort to embroider its glorious history Los Angeles will have a statue to Felipe de Neve, official founder of the city. But it is hoped the sculptor will not make the serious mistake of trying to make it life-like. We crave heroes for our pioneers. But it is a fine thing to recognize them in marble or bronze. We have neglected them too long.

THE COLORADO RIOT

The fourth and most serious prison riot of the year—that at Canon City, Colo., in which thirteen persons, seven guards and six convicts, met death and a dozen others were wounded—emphasizes once more the fact that the prison problem in this country has by no means been solved.

It also emphasizes the fact that the conflict of society with the criminal element is a real war, in which the criminals at least will give no quarter. The guards slain at Canon City were not killed in fair fight; they were brutally murdered in cold blood, while wholly helpless and defenseless.

The riots at Dannemora, Auburn and Leavenworth were attributed to over-crowding. The riot at Canon City is yet to be investigated and so far only one cogent fact is apparent—that there was a supply of arms and ammunition too readily at hand, and too poorly guarded. From news accounts, it seems that the prison arsenal was located inside the prison walls. If this is true, it does not accord with the best practice, which is to keep all dangerous weapons where it will be almost impossible for prisoners to reach them.

There must have been lax discipline somewhere to permit the mutiny to get such a start. For vigilant prison officials, there are nearly always premonitory signs to be discerned which will enable them to meet the situation. If there was none in this case, it still appears that the responsible heads of the prison government were caught napping.

Prison authorities must guard against all possible contingencies. They cannot afford to permit themselves to be surprised. Perhaps the majority of convicts can be judged by ordinary human standards, but there are in every prison enough men as dangerous as rattlesnakes, and with the same moral fiber, to make it highly hazardous to take any chances.

SHEARER AND SHEARER

The revelation brought out by Senator Shortridge's committee investigating the activities of William B. Shearer that this paid propagandist, after being discharged by shipbuilding interests, went to work for William Randolph Hearst at a very large salary to promote sentiment against the World Court, is an important one.

The snake of the "big navy" propaganda is a dead snake, thanks to the work of President Hoover, Ambassador Macmillan, Ambassador Dawes and Premier MacDonald, and the Senate investigation did no more than to skin it and hang out its hide to dry. But its twin has been vigorously wriggling and the admissions by both Shearer and Shearer that the former was paying the latter a princely salary for making it wriggle in life-like fashion are of real significance as showing the artificial character of the bought-and-paid-for agitator against American participation in the World Court.

Shearer's work for Hearst, he testified, was to obtain resolutions from "patriotic societies" supporting that ultimatum war upon the World Court which Hearst has waged since the idea was first proposed. How many of these organizations have been duped by the wily Shearer during the course of his operations has not been disclosed, but the Senate will do well to inquire into this phase of the matter and obtain, if possible, names, dates and places, so that it can be estimated how much manufactured sentiment has been placed before the members of that body and the public as genuine.

For working thus for the glory of Hearst, who in this matter, as in so many others, aspires to be the bad boy of international relations, Shearer testified, he received $2000 a month. Hearst's own signed "explanation" of the matter says that his organization had no knowledge of Shearer's previous paid connection with the shipbuilding interests and the appended copy of the letter dismissing Shearer from the Hearst service says that he is being let go because of this revelation "which you now for the first time make public." The plain inference is that Hearst fired Shearer the minute he discovered that Shearer had been a salaried propagandist for builders of warships.

The dates of the several incidents, however, tell a different story. Shearer himself first made public his connection with the shipbuilders in the suit he filed against them on August 21 for $250,000 alleged to be due as back pay. This suit was filed in New York, where is published Hearst's principal paper, the New York American, whose editor Hearst declares was the man who hired Shearer to work for the Hearst papers.

After waiting more than two weeks for the shipbuilders to come forward with some sort of a voluntary explanation of Shearer's statements in his suit, President Hoover, on September 10, publicly denounced the "deal." Senator Borah's resolution providing for an investigation by the Senate of the whole matter was introduced September 10 and published in the morning papers of September 11.

The letter dismissing Shearer from the Hearst service is dated September 11. In other words, Hearst did not fire Shearer as soon as the latter's connection with the shipbuilders was made public, as he says, nor even when the President denounced Shearer. He did fire him, however, the moment it became certain that everything would come out at the hands of a Senate investigating committee—some three weeks after Shearer himself had made the facts public in his New York suit. So, by his own statement, Hearst kept Shearer in his employ at $500 a week for three weeks after Shearer had informed the world, including Hearst, that he was a professional lobbyist for hire and discharged him then only because it was evident that he was likely to become a dangerous asset. The spectacle is thus presented of Hearst on the one hand literally robbing at the mouth all lobbyists, and on the other knowingly employing the man who, according to his own estimate at least, was the king of paid lobbyists and propagandists. As a matter of fact, so notorious was Shearer as a Washington lobbyist, that if Hearst seriously believed, even before Shearer's suit, that the latter was working for his health, the publisher's guillotine was exceeded only by that he exhibited in his purchase and exploitation of the forged Mexican documents.

In his editorial statement Hearst says

Shearer was employed "among many others" to write articles on the League of Nations and the World Court. If there were "many others" at $3000 a month each the poison-propaganda campaign must have been an expensive business.

But Shearer was not only employed to "write articles" if his own statements under oath are entitled to credit at all; he was employed mainly to the political opposition to him.

Thus is made public by the principals themselves, the real character of the principal opposition to our taking part in the World Court. The Court, as every student of international affairs well knows, is a necessary adjunct to the Kellogg peace pact. By that pact we have bound ourselves, and all the other signers have bound themselves, to seek the settlement of international disputes by peaceful means. But the Kellogg pact provides no machinery for peaceful settlement. The World Court is the instrument selected by virtually all the other signatory nations to perform this function, and our adherence would be the signal that would bring the few remaining outsiders into line.

Adherence to the Court has been favored by Presidents Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, as a real contribution to world peace. All reasonable objections have been removed by the Root formula and a vote on the question should be obtained at the regular session opening in December.

It is well worth while, therefore, to have the ground cleared of the main obstruction. The Hearst and Shearer paid-for propaganda, the Senate will recognize, will require no time for consideration, but can be brushed aside.

Prison authorities must guard against all possible contingencies. They cannot afford to permit themselves to be surprised. Perhaps the majority of convicts can be judged by ordinary human standards, but there are in every prison enough men as dangerous as rattlesnakes, and with the same moral fiber, to make it highly hazardous to take any chances.

LEE SIDE O'LA

BY Lee Shippey

OBERT LOUIS STEVENSON wrote of London as "the Bagdad of the West." O. Henry, who doubtless knew his Stevenson, was fond of picturing New York as the modern Bagdad. But westward the course of Bagdad takes its way, and now Hollywood is the magic city to which adventurers and poets and dreamers flock from all the world, most of them seeking caliphs and a good many of them finding only balliffs.

There also are some adventures to bag dad.

In any big Hollywood hotel you may find people from everywhere, all drawn here by hopes of launching great dreams. And in many a Hollywood lodging-house or boarding-house you will find people with crested cigarette cases who claim to be members of the nobility—and some of them are. Jesse Lasky has declared that within ten years Los Angeles will be the artistic center of the world, and there are many observers who believe a new golden age of art and philosophy is dawning here. Certain it is that all these moving forces, these eager dreamers, these passionate visionaries, these idea-motored people, must bring many strange things to pass.

CATHOLIC HOTELS

This column has quoted before the remark Fannie Hurst made to us: "Passing through the lobby of this hotel (the Roosevelt) one might imagine himself in New York or Paris or the Riviera, so many world-known people are here." The same thing might as truly have been said of the Beverly Wilshire, the Beverly Hills, the Ambassador, the old Hollywood or any one of several other hotels.

We went to see David Edstrom, the big, genial Swedish sculptor, at the Hollywood Plaza yesterday and, having this idea in mind, checked off the people we saw in the lounge there. We doubt that such a group of people could be found under one roof anywhere outside of Hollywood, yet it was such a crowd as one might find in any one of half a dozen hotels out that way. These were the people we saw:

Not Enough Magic Carpets

And this, mind you, wasn't an unusual crowd for a Hollywood hotel, but quite the usual thing. It wasn't in one of the biggest hotels or typical of one alone; it was typical of Hollywood.

But, alas! many dreamers who come to this new Bagdad find no magic carpets to transport them back home. Quite a few have to hitch-hike.

BIG GAME FOR WOMEN

The way the women are shooting them up, there is liable to be a world famine in husbands by Christmas. Only the other day a wife filled her husband full of lead in the presence of company because she did not like the way he played a bridge hand. Still more recently a woman blew her spouse into kingdom come because he objected to her going to a dance. It does seem that husbands are lacking in diplomacy when it comes to little social matters like the dance and the bridge game. Possibly they ought to be shot, but at the same time there is a suspicion that the dames are a bit too quick on the trigger. They are getting in the habit of shooting first and explaining afterward and sometimes the male has a plausible defense. The average girl appears to have had too much target practice to make a complaisant housewife.

COMING OR GOING

The flying folks have put two more new words in the dictionary. They are "deplane" and "deplane" and they mean just the same as entrain and deplane except that you do it wing in stated of Pullman.

The jellyfish his living gains Without the aid of any brains.

He drifts around the sound or bay Absorbing food that floats his way.

No ears to hear, no eyes to wink, No nose to smell, no mind to think,

The jellyfish is just a mass Of wobbly, wavy aqueous glass.

And yet, although devoid of sense He's always quick to take offense

And if you brush him in the tide He'll sink small nettles in your hide,

Each one a barbed and poisoned sting Which bothers you like anything.

The jellyfish, I think, displays A very common human phase.

For all the creatures, man and beast, Which have of intellect the least

As any shrewd observer knows Are quickest to resort to blows.

So do not fight, unless you wish To class among the jellyfish.

PAINTING THE LILY

(Kansas City Star)

Modern Jeremiads who thunder at the wildness and extravagance of the present age will find little to complain about. Last year American women used 4000 tons of powder (non-explosive) and enough lipstick to reach from Chicago to Los Angeles, by way of San Francisco.

As we feel the results may justify the outcry, we feel the results may justify the outcry.

Yet the women didn't really need these aids to beauty, did they?

EIGHTEEN CENTS

(Emporia (Kan.) Gazette)

The clarion call of President Hoover the other day for the reduction of army expenses and the reduction of the Federal budget to $12 cents of every Federal tax dollar for war, war debts, or war purposes—armies, navies, defenses, pensions, interest on war loans and the like—was a call of common sense. For the 18 cents of Federal tax that is not spent for war we buy a good deal indeed, all the other departments of government.

FEMININE THINKING DEFENDED

(Chicago News)

The fruits of feminine thinking are not at all bad. Certainly such thinking is preferable to thinking at all, and not a few academic scholars come perilously near total incapacity for thinking in their loose and shallow deliverances.

RAMSAY MACDONALD

BY BELLE COOPER

Another chapter is being added to the romantic life history of Ramsay MacDonald, the son of a poor, humble Scots peasant, who is now at the helm in British politics. The story of this lad from Northern Scotland, born in the year 1866 in a tiny cottage euphemistically called "The Hilllock" in Lossiemouth, the village seaport of historic Elgin—till he became master of the rambling labyrinth of hallways, offices and living apartments at 10 Downing street, long the London residence of the British Premiers, is one of romantic interest worthy of being the theme of a modern novel. The quondam cottar's son, later a druggist's assistant, and now, for the second time, Premier of England, is in America conferring with President Herbert Hoover on problems re-lated to world-wide amity.

Numerous have been the sketches of the political aspects of this great leader, but the story of his social development is of even deeper interest.

James Ramsay MacDonald was, like Thomas Carlyle, a son of the soil; his birthplace was a "but-and-ben," the primitive dwelling of the peasantry in Scotland, in a small fishing village—but today of some 4000 inhabitants—clinging to the heathy slopes of Elginshire. Per-ap it was the close personal relationship due to humble early surroundings that led to a personal and critical mind between him and his critical yet kindly mother.

Lossiemouth lies on the Moray Firth about forty miles from Inverness, the "capital of the Highlands," the northern terminus of the steamer trip from Oban through the Caledonian Canal. The Macdonalds' murder in "Macbeth." Though the village is small it has economic importance as the seaport of Elgin, and for 100 years it has been the center of the salmon fishing industry. A number of historic cathedrals and monasteries grace the district, notably Elgin Cathedral, which is the most famous in Scotland. The neighboring towns of Nairn and Forres are much frequented as sea-bathing resorts. The section is not without literary associations. Within twenty miles lies Cawdor Castle, from which Macbeth took his second title, "Thane of Cawdor," granted by Duncan's order.

The lad had visions of a professorship or a pulpit, and practiced public speaking and writing. His winning of a prize for a story in a newspaper competition was a turning point in his life.

To find a career suitable for his ambitions, the young lad, not quite 20 years old, went to London. His first employment there was in a warehouse, invoicing merchandise for twelve shillings and sixpence a week. Later he became public secretary to a rich merchant. His mother died

TAXI DRIVER SEIZED
IN STATUTORY
SUNDAY MORNING.

Harold Jacobson, a taxi driver, 22 years of age, of 303 South Drive, was arrested by police at his street address. He was accused of a statutory offense against Mrs. Willie Rose, a negro, 19 years of age, at 16th and Third streets. Jacobson, according to the officers, engaged in the same勾当 as Jacobson at several streets shortly before daybreak. Instead of driving his car, he had it arrested, and then drove to another 16th street between Kip and Hill streets and attacked her. He had not paid the taxi license money when the officers came to arrest him. Jacobson was turned over to the District Attorney's office.
